

What would happen if the zombies raided your school? Would you survive?

ZOMBIE APOCALYPSE

The situation: You arrive at school on an ordinary day. You greet your friends and go to your locker to stash your coat and some of your books. You grab what you need to start your day and head to your first class, ready to be bored out of your mind. Greeting a couple of friends, you go into your classroom and take your seat. Everything starts out normally as your teacher begins reading from the textbook. Then...

1. You look out the window and notice that it is becoming very dark and cloudy. Your teacher ignores the weather outside, but seems to stutter as he reads and his left arm starts twitching.

You:

- Raise your hand to go to the bathroom.
- Continue following along in your textbook.
- Sneak out of your seat and head towards the door.
- Start writing a note to pass to your friend across the room.

2. Before you can decide what this might mean, torrential rain starts pouring down. Thunder and lightning are nearly continuous. You look at your teacher and he smiles at you. Two of his teeth are missing. You have never noticed this before. You:

- Laugh at the teacher.
- Recommend a good dentist to him.
- Avert your eyes and look for the nearest exit.
- Pretend to look at your book and try to make a plan.

3. The power goes out in the classroom. You wait for the generators to turn the lights back on, but nothing happens. You hear a moaning sound from the front of the room. You:

- Get out of your seat quietly and crawl towards the door.
- Count the seconds between the thunder and lightning.
- Ask who farted.
- Try to discreetly get other students' attention to see if they hear it.

4. A thud from the front of the room accents the moaning. In the next lightning flash, you see that your teacher's arm has fallen off and is on the floor with several of his teeth. You:

- Giggle nervously and stay seated.
- Run for the door.
- Hide under your desk.
- Scream.

5. By now, other students have noticed that the teacher is changing into something horrible. One of the boys throws a chair at him and you take the opportunity to run into the hall. Several other students are in the halls, wild-eyed and scared. You see your best friend, she looks terrified. You:

- Go up to her and tell her that her hair looks great today.
- Ask her what happened to her.
- Ask her to go with you to the bathroom.
- Grab her and pull her towards the gym, where there's an exit.

6. Suddenly, a bunch of students begin rushing towards the gym. You are caught in the flow of bodies and dragged along. You barely make it in before someone slams the doors. Your best friend is on the other side of the door, but the boys who shut the doors have blocked them.

You:

- Try to convince the boys to open the doors.
- Punch them in the face and let her in, along with whoever follows her.
- Wave sadly and walk away.
- Find a new best friend.
